“ Helen Ruth, I don't even know where to begin. You've been a part of my family since childhood. It doesn't seem real. Even though we knew you were very ill, we also knew you were a fighter. You fought to the very end and with a positive attitude. I never once heard you complain about wanting to give up, even though the physicians weren't giving you much hope. Your strong faith and your will and determination kept you beating the odds. I will also miss being around you and catching up on the latest news and gossip. One thing I can truthfully say about you is; you were an equal opportunity gossip. You gossiped about your family as well, and as often as you did other people. Even though some may call it gossip, but for the most part it was true. You would be the first to impart this information to the family. I'm not sure how you got this information, so fast, but we were always willing participants to listen. This I will miss. I will also miss those funny stories and jokes you shared with us. You could tell them without cracking a smile. You could make anything sound funny. You were the epitome of a strong, faithful, courageous and fearless woman even while facing the outcome the doctors presented you with. I only hope that when my journey here on earth is nearing an apparent end, I will exhibit the same qualities. You will be greatly missed by this family. Helen Ruth, I won't say good-bye, but later. Your sister-in-law, "Shorty"
